This drawing took two sessions in which the figures done by brown colours at the last session of art therapy. Although there was no progress yet, the primary conflicts as he described remained unresolved.

As he described through his drawing, his desire for having companion and secure and normal life yet, he was not able to recognize the inner self and was emphasizing in outer self most often.

On the other hand the outer self also was unacceptable and undesirable for him too. He used very light yellow colour for drawing the self and it is very hard to see or recognize yet, other contents of his drawing is showing clearly.
